This older ranch home in Sandy Springs, GA was one of several purchased by an investment group for complete renovation and then resale. After some dissatisfaction with their original architect, Recivilize and our own architectural partner were brought in to rethink the entire set of design parameters, re-measuring the entire house 'as-built' and then providing new conceptual plans that were approved and converted into new construction drawings. The final result was a Recivilized home that featured classic design elements, pleasing symmetries, and supremely livable indoor and outdoor spaces that fetched a strong resale price and return on investment.
