This brand new home in the hot Reynoldstown area of Atlanta was conceived and designed to fit seamlessly into the existing neighborhood. Situated on a tight corner lot, and mandated to meet the affordable housing requirements for the NeighborWorks program while also delivering modern features and performance was a challenge, but Recivilize was more than up for it.

The finished home features timeless architecture set off by a gracious wrap around front porch, classic proportions and symmetries. Inside, the main level provides an open living plan, and a flex room that can be used as a den, office, third bedroom or more. Upstairs has two complete bedroom suites: one in the rear, and the master bedroom in the front, which includes a large master bath and two walk-in closets (one for him and one for her). Best of all, this home met all of the affordable housing requirements and was presold prior to its completion.
